Australasian Meat Industry Employees' Union (Queensland Branch) Collection

Size	215 boxes
Contents	Records of the Australasian Meat Industry Employees' Union (Queensland Branch) and its predecessor organisations, and arbitration court records relating to cases involving the AMIEU.
Date range	1899 to 1997
Biography	The Australasian Meat Industry Employees' Union, originally called the Australasian Federated Butchers Employees' Union, was formed in 1905 from a number of smaller organisations, including the Brisbane Butchers Employees' Union. Covering skilled and unskilled workers in all sectors of the Australian meat processing industry, the AMIEU became one of Australia's most powerful industrial unions. In Queensland it was involved in many bitter disputes, including the Townsville meatworkers' strike of 1918-19 and the 1946 meat industry strike.
Notes	Open access Boxes 1-106 are organised into the following series: A. AMIEU reports, correspondence and minutes; B. Industrial arbitration proceedings and government inquiries; C. AMIEU and industry publications, and newspaper cuttings. Boxes 107-213 contain records of the Queensland and Federal bodies of the AMIEU, records of the Brisbane Butchers Employees' Union, and arbitration transcripts and determinations relating to wages and conditions in the meat industry. The collection was rehoused in 2013 and box numbers were reallocated.
